Third printing now ready:

ALFRED NOYES' COLLECTED POEMS

In two volumes: 12mo, gilt top, portrait frontispiece, $3.00 net.

First printing was exhausted six weeks after publication. Second printing was sold out two weeks after we got it from the binders. Because of the extraordinary demand we were out of stock for a few days, but are now prepared to fill all orders promptly.

Mr. Noyes' visit to this country will extend through the early spring, and his lectures will cover a wider territory than before Christmas, thus stimulating the demand.

TALES of the MERMAID TAVERN, now in its third printing, is also in stock. It is on every list of the best books of 1913 that we have seen.

THE WINE PRESS

Alfred Noyes' great peace poem of the Balkan war, has caused a sensation wherever read. Cloth, 16mo, 60c net.

Ready Feb. 3rd.

To the Trade:

Our first announcement in 1914 is one which we believe will find welcome and support from all of you.

On April 1st our entire list of publications will be placed on the net basis, and all titles which have hitherto been sold at regular prices will thereafter be sold at net prices only.

As April 1st is the beginning of our financial year, we have felt it an appropriate season to make this change, leaving you, as it does, this opportunity of stocking up on the old basis should you care to do so.

With the compliments of the season, and our best wishes for a prosperous New Year,

Yours very truly,

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN CO,

THANKS and APOLOGIES

To the Booksellers of the United States and Canada

Our thanks for the generous patronage that has given us our biggest business year.

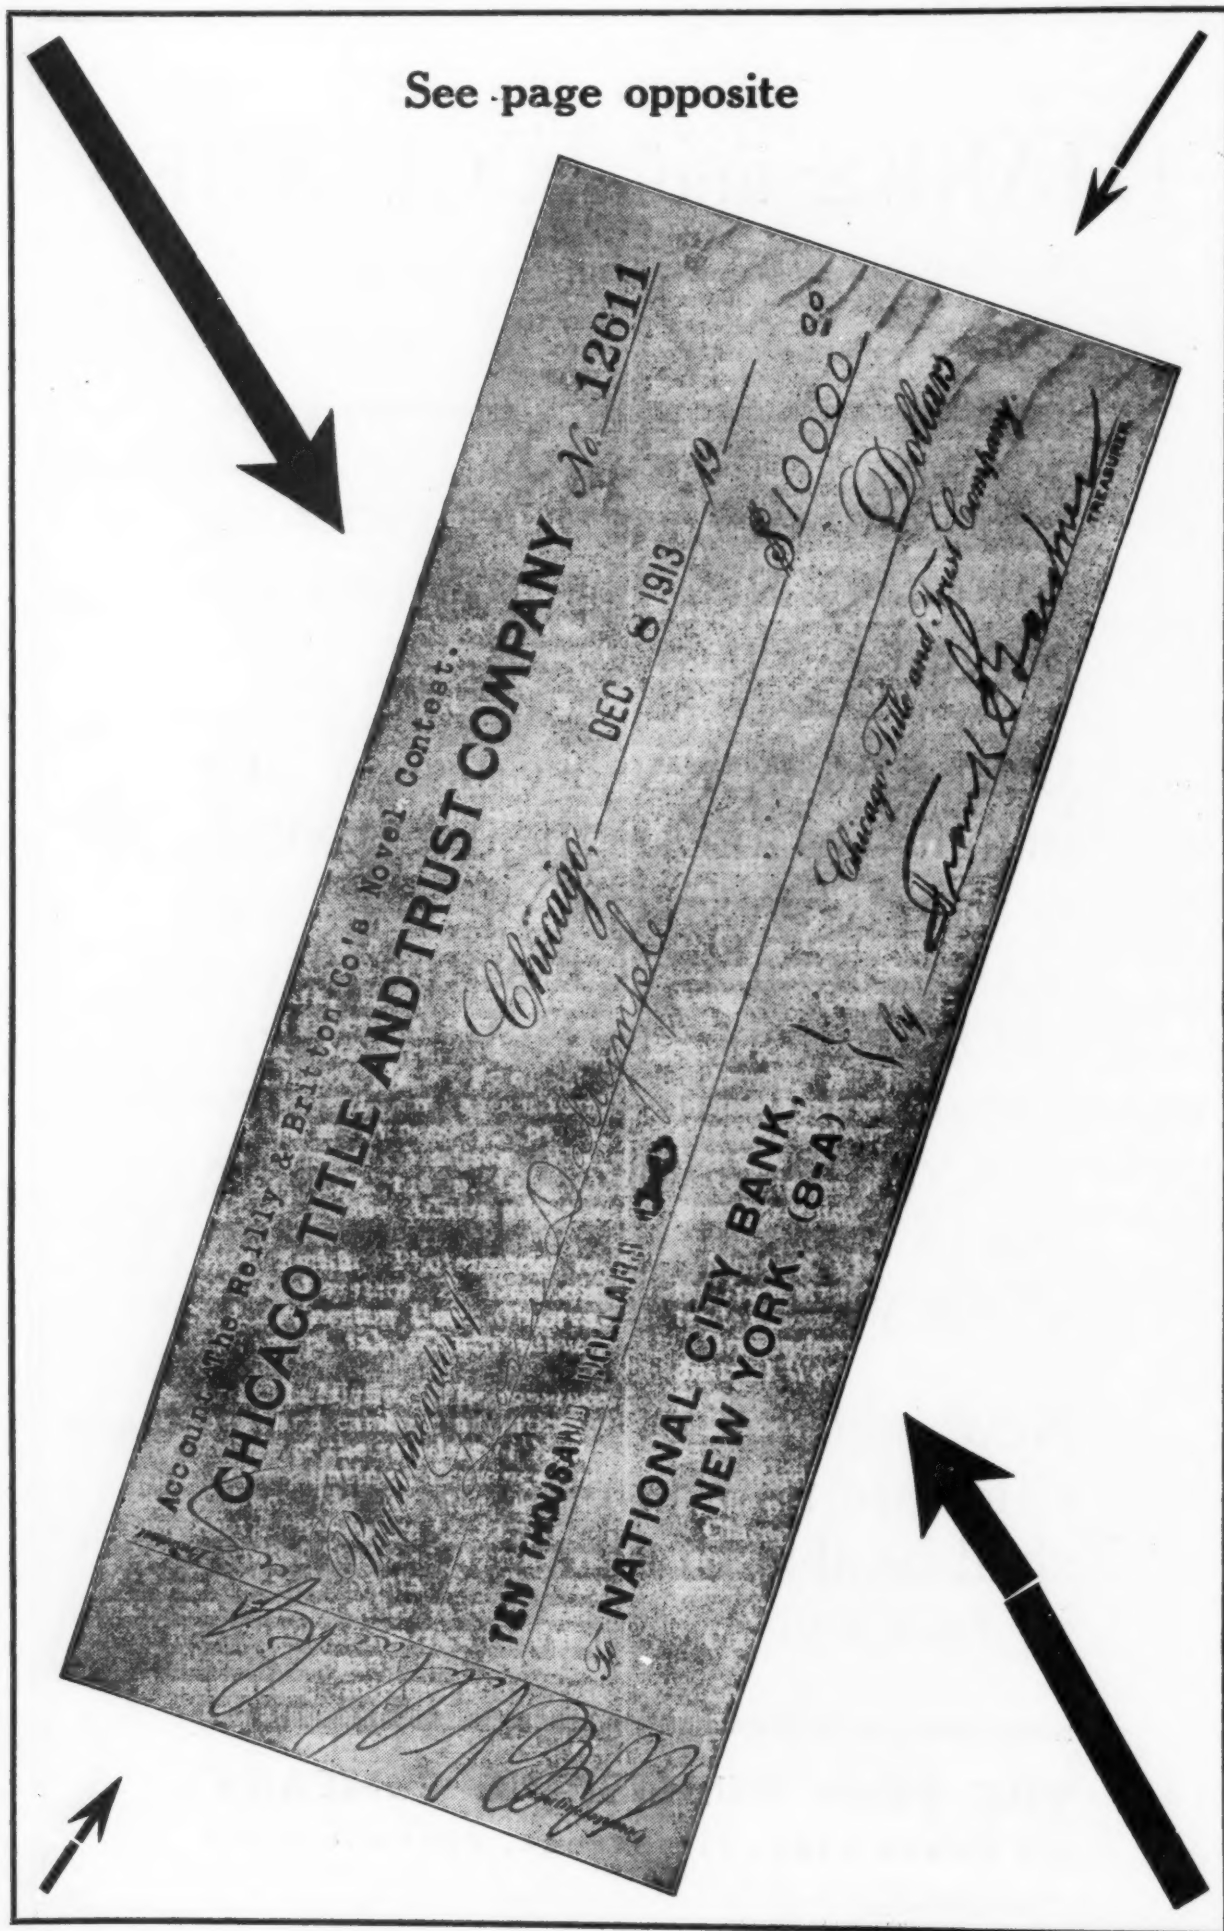

Our apologies because of our inability to foresee the unexpected demand for several of our new books—notably “Unvisited Places of Old Europe,” by Robert Shackleton—and the inconvenience caused the trade by our being out of them at the busiest season of the year.

New editions of all out-of-print titles are now in process, and we shall be able to fill all orders early in January.

On January 16th we will publish two novels; one for the mood that wishes to be thoroughly entertained, and the other for the mood that wishes an interpretation of modern life.

The Butterfly

By HENRY KITCHELL WEBSTER, author of "The Ghost Girl" and "The Whispering Man," deals with a beautiful dancer of world fame who drops into a little college town and involves a young professor in a mysterious murder. A great many people think that Mr. Webster is concealing under his fanciful title a portrait of a well-known popular favorite. In making out your initial order bear in mind the strength of this story and the popularity of the author. Beautifully illustrated cover.

THE year 1913 will undoubtedly go down in booktrade history, as in the record of general business, as one of marking time. Its predominant note has been cautiousness, and while there have been no important catastrophes there has been also no marked advance. One event of importance has indeed occurred, the final decision in the long drawn-out Macy litigation; but that came so late in the year as to have had little effect on the year's business, if indeed, as now looks unlikely, it is to have any at all.

There has been progress in trade solidarity. The trade associations have widened their memberships and strengthened their respective influences. Particularly has the Bookseller's League of New York invaded a hitherto untouched field by sustaining through the year its most helpful series of instructional lectures for bookstore assistants. The Co-operative Bureau of certain of the publishers promises to be a most effective agent, and, best omen of all, the strict maintenance of prices has been continued by practically all members of the trade.

Though the reform sought is not yet in practice, the campaign for the inclusion of books in the parcel post has met with success, and along lines which, while not fully meeting the wishes of the trade, yet offer fairly satisfactory compromise. Nothing came, however, of the movement for lower freight rates on books.

The year's bankruptcy record has, considering general conditions, been remarkably good. Five publishers of general books went under during the year, only two of them trade publishers, however, and both insignificant. Of bookstore failures there were twenty-three this year, according to our statistical record, as against thirty-three last year and twenty-three in 1911. Of these, moreover, practically all were relatively unimportant and only three are worthy of mention, the Williams Book Store in Boston, the Wisconsin Book & Stationery Co., and—news of the last coming within the week—the Henry Siegel concerns operating department stores, several of them with book departments, in Chicago, New York and Boston. In this last failure, however, book-trade conditions played no part.

On the other hand, despite the rather unfavorable outlook, no less than forty-seven bookstores—most of them small, of course—started in business during the year, while at least four general publishing houses, the Devin-Adair Company and Sully & Kleinteich in New York, and the Browne & Howell Co. and the Laurentian Publishers in Chicago, launched into the field. Cassell's American branch was taken over by Funk & Wagnalls, and the New York branch of Raphael Tuck & Sons was merged with the London house. In Pittsburgh there were important trade changes during the year; the R. S. Davis bookstore being taken over by T. E. Jones and J. Norman Remington Company, which latter have also assumed control of the Eichelberger bookstore in Baltimore.

There were an unusual number of removals during the year. The H. W. Wilson Company moved from Minneapolis to White Plains, N. Y., and the Office of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY from its old quarters at 298 Broadway, New York City, to new ones at 141 E. 25th Street. The uptown trend in New York was accentuated by the northward removals of Funk & Wagnalls, Chas. Scribner's Sons, Mitchell Kennerley, E. P. Dutton & Co., and others.

Alike to those who have moved and to those who haven't the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY extends its best wishes for the new year!

In the last few months our publishing friends have rather swamped our reading pages with a flood of window display illustrations. To be of any value to the trade at large such reproductions must be discriminative. A window display, conventionally arranged and perhaps poorly photographed, is simply and solely a free advertisement of the books displayed and the store displaying—and not a very good one at that. An attractive and attention-drawing display, on the other hand, one that shows cleverness and originality, either in ensemble technical execution or some detail, however minor, has a real interest to the trade at large and so deserves place in these pages. May we ask that those sending pictures hereafter, accompany them with a brief note pointing out any original ideas or methods, and stating how such ideas were worked out.

THE B. C. T. HOLD 29TH DINNER.

THE Brotherhood of Commercial Travelers, the "league of good fellows" of the book-trade, held their 29th annual dinner at the Waldorf-Astoria last Tuesday night. Conflicting engagements kept away a few familiar faces, but the "old guard" were there in force and the "kids" as well. With "something doing" every minute it was not strange that the 29th proved one of the most hilariously successful dinners of recent years.

The fun began at 7:30 and, when at 8:00 members and guests sat down at the flower-decked horseshoe table, was in full swing. The following excellent menu was attacked forthwith:

MENU

	Huitres de Cape Cod
	Potage à la Windsor
	GRAVES SUPÉRIEUR
Radis	Olives	Céleri Amandes
	Filet de sole anglaise au vin blanc
	Pommes de terre persillade
	ST. ESTÈPHE
	Ris de veau à l'Eugenie
	Medaillon d'agneau, sauce Colbert
	Petits pois sautés, Vichy
	MÖET & CHANDON WHITE SEAL VERY DRY
	Sorbet au rhum
	Poitrine de pintade farcie, sauce hongroise
	Salade de laitue et pamplemousse
Glaces de fantaisie	Gateaux assortis
	Café
COGNAC	CREME DE MENTHE

Every course was digested with a song—or two or three of them—and as oases of liquid refreshment punctuated the dinner at frequent intervals the courses were none too many.

Entertainment was furnished by a company of professional cabaret artists. They were entirely unneeded, however, as it became quite evident during the evening that the Brotherhood itself could furnish any amount of talent. Jack Winters in rag-time with the true professional twang, received frequent encores. Willie Macmillan, of Wanamaker's, brought Harry Lauder to the dinner direct, while Jack Winters and Joe Green of Little, Brown & Company tangoed, maxixed and turkey trotted in a manner to excite professional envy. Choruses of all the songs used had been distributed on a printed folder, and everybody joined in on them with much lusty enthusiasm, so much in fact that each stanza averaged about three choruses.

Speech making began about ten with the address of the retiring president, Brother L. C.

Page, following which he was invested with the honorary insignia of his office by Brother Bill Kelly. The first speaker was Mr. William H. Barter, a Boston attorney, who had some good stories to tell, and, following him, Mr. George McAneny, president of the Borough of Manhattan of the City of New York, extended the welcome and congratulations of the City to the Brotherhood. He was followed by the incoming president, Wm. B. Walker of Samuel Gabriel Sons & Co. Mr. Walker's address was a really eloquent presentation of the history and ideals of the Brotherhood. Last on the list of speakers, if anything so informal can be called that, came Fremont Rider, of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY. He likened the commercial traveler to the explorer of business, continually the pioneer of merchandizing, continually blazing new trails for commerce, and with this simile in mind, closed with a recitation of Kipling's "Explorer."

MR. WALKER'S ADDRESS.

Mr. President and Brothers:

THE Brotherhood of Commercial Travelers—Whence its inception? What are its aims and purposes? Why and for what are we here?

Twenty-nine years ago, at Moretti's, an establishment more or less famed for the excellence of its cuisine (for, be it known, in matters gastronomic the Knights of the Grip brook no superior), there met a number of gentlemen (I think about one hundred) associated with the book and stationery trade and kindred lines, and sat down to the first B. C. T. dinner. Many of them have since crossed the "dark river": I hold in my hand an autograph album, of which I then became possessed, in which are inscribed by their own hands, the names of such men as: John H. Ammon, E. C. Swayne, John McQuillan, Henry Reed, Peter Banta, Albert E. Turner, Fred. W. Horn, Frank O. Evans, Chas. Plummer, Geo. Ayres, John Black, Jake Dengler, and alas, many others! What cherished memories do not these names recall! They have gone on a prospecting journey to that far country, the Great Beyond; but the good fellowship begotten by that gathering and subsequent meetings of a like nature have enshrined them in our memory, and they have an abiding place in our consciousness which will continue to obtain while the sands of life shall run.

Mr. President, before I continue my remarks, (and by way of allaying your fears, I now promise to be brief) I respectfully request you to ask this assembled company to rise and in silence drink to the memory of these absent ones—those who have gone to that "bourne from which no traveler returns."

The men then and there gathered had frequently met upon their travels, had discovered the helpfulness born of friendliness, had participated in the social amenities of the road, so keenly prized, so highly appreciated, because so much needed when absent from home and the home environment. They had heard the words of hope and encouragement and constructive cheer, which buoyed them up when the "indigo devils," to which we are all more or less subject, were gnawing at their vitals, when orders were scarce [laughter] and the world seemed black. They had discovered that there was a desire to be of mutual service; they had seen the uprooting of the time-worn fallacy that friendship was inconsistent and incompatib formed which have done much to make smooth the rugged pathway, brought joyousness into many an otherwise joyless hour, brought the sunshine of hope and comfort into the gloom of sadness and despair, and have taught many a Commercial Traveler the due sense and the true interpretation and the nobility of the word "Brotherhood." Yes, with competition; they had begun to realize that, at the last analysis, all men were brothers. This was the inception of the Brotherhood of Commercial Travelers!

From such a genesis, surely one may rightfully expect a sturdy, sterling growth and an abundant and glorious fruition! Unselfishness, kindness, forbearance, toleration, sacrifice, charity, altruism in all its best and highest and noblest forms—these are the legitimate issue of such a parentage! [Applause.]

Under the benign influences of these annual festive gatherings, friendships have been the highest aim of the B. C. T. is to engender and cultivate loyal, healthy, helpful friendships—such friendship as that to which Mark Antony referred, when, at the body of the dead Caesar, he exclaimed, "He was my friend, faithful and just to me!" [Applause.]

We care not much for that friendship whose voice is loudest and whose laugh is longest when the wine-cup sheds its ruby light and joy runs rampant. But we cherish and "grapple to our souls with hoops of steel" that friendship which makes itself manifest when the gale of misfortune makes tatters of our canvas, when the tempestuous waves of adversity threaten to engulf our frail bark—that friendship which, under these conditions, is ever ready with keen sympathy, words of hope and cheer, sage advice, helpful hand, fraught, if need be, with a little of the “ready rhino,” [laughter] wherewith to aid us withal until the storm of adversity has passed and we descry the dawning of a better day! Such is the friendship which finds expression in the B. C. T.!

In some form or other, we have all been its beneficiaries, for if we have not received, we have given, and verily, it is indeed “more blessed to give than to receive.”

I have thus briefly related the inception of the Brotherhood of Commercial Travelers: I have in like manner endeavored to voice its aims, and the answer to the question, Why and for what are we here? is this: We are here to-night to perpetuate its purposes and to emphasize its ideals.

In conclusion, Mr. President and Gentlemen, let me offer you the following toast: In the year to come, may the canvas of our bark be white and whole, without rent or tear, and filled with fair winds. May we come to port, laden with health and success and sweet content. May this Brotherhood of Commercial Travelers continue to wax stronger, ever having for its highest purpose the cultivation and extension of that friendship which makes glad the heart of man and lightens the load of the road! [Continued applause.]

The retiring president, Mr. Page, delighted the brothers with a general distribution of “B. C. T.” canes, silver mounted and appropriately engraved.

It was considerably after midnight before the company broke up with a singing of “Vive la Compagnie.” The following were present:

KENNERLEY CLERK FINED.

WILLIAM CLEARY, clerk in the book store of Mitchell Kennerley, at 2 East Twenty-ninth Street, New York City, who was arrested by agents of the Society for the Suppression of Vice some weeks ago for selling copies of an alleged immoral book, was convicted on Dec. 18th by Court of Special Sessions, Part V, of the charge of selling immoral literature, and was sentenced last Monday by Justices Moss, Fleming and O'Keefe to pay a fine of $50 or serve ten days in the city prison.

An agent of Anthony Comstock purchased a copy of Daniel Carson Goodman's book, “Hagar Revelly,” from Cleary. Comstock was the complainant.

In sentencing the defendant, Justice Moss said:

“You are only the clerk, and if we had the publisher of this book we would not have dealt so leniently with him. This book is obscene and filthy. The author of it knew what he was writing. He wrote it for dollars and cents and not to uplift the morals or make better women and girls.”

WHAT SHALL OUR GIRLS READ?

WHAT THEY LIKE TO READ AND WHY—THE OLD AND NEW FICTION.

CLARA W. HERBERT, head of the children's department of the Washington (D. C.) public library, writes for a recent issue of the Springfield Republican a carefully balanced article on reading for girls. Miss Herbert knows her clientele as well as the books available and what she says should interest the average bookseller as well as the publisher of juvenile literature.

The average girl, she says, passes from the reading of fairy tales to stories of boy and girl life sometime between the ages of 10 and 13. School does not tax her heavily then, and she reads omnivorously. But what shall she read? To those of us who read many girls' books and test them with the girls themselves, the question is one of some importance. For the popularity of a girl's story seems to depend upon the appeal it makes to her idealistic side. In no other way can her judgment of books be understood.

The girl during the early adolescent period is emotional, aspiring, prone to introspection, a creature made up of “thrills and throbs.” She does not know it, but she is satisfied only with books which present something that to her seems ideal, something that she can apply to her own life. That she should seek the ideal in what she reads is quite natural, when one remembers that Nature had endowed her peculiarly with the vision of the ideal, intrusting to her the spiritual attainment of the race, just as the future of the race itself is given to her to nurture.

ALL BOYS' AND GIRLS' READING IS PROPHECIC.

The reading of both boys and girls is prophetic; the boy craves tales of action and adventure. For it is to be his part to go out into the world of action and achievement; the girl wishes to read of characters whom she can admire and whose virtues she can appropriate to her own life. She must find in her books seeds for spiritual growth, so that later she will be able to make home beautiful, her children happy and good, and the lives of all she meets brighter and better. If one watches girls and questions them about their reading, this seems to be the only true explanation of their taste. It is rather appalling to find that Elsie Dinsmore is a most popular heroine, yet I am forced to believe that almost all girls, if strictly honest, do like her, even though willing to admit that she would not be a happy companion.

They consider her a model girl, and, if not laughed at, admire her.

Again, it is almost impossible to make the average girl read a story not laid in the present time and in surroundings and circumstances similar to her own. Historical tales, and those dealing with life in other lands, are not generally popular, as are the stories of school and neighborhood life, or those in which the heroine assumes charge of the family during the illness, or after the death, of one of the parents. Authors have learned that this is a popular basis for girls' stories. Thus the difficulty is to give to the girl books in sufficient numbers, satisfying this real need of hers—and she will not read them unless they do meet this need in some way—and still give her anything that will be stimulating intellectually. At present there are hardly 30 girls' stories which add anything to her mentally. How is this range to be broadened?

WHY NOT THE CLASSICS?

Someone suggests, why read girls' stories at all? Why not read Scott, Dickens, or the works of classic authors, as did the children of a generation ago? The chief reason is that just as one can take a horse to water, but cannot make him drink, one cannot get the ordinary adolescent girl to read these books so dear to old and young 40 years ago. The modern book with its red covers, big print, attractive and up-to-date illustrations, conversation and general air of being easily finished, makes the closely-printed pages of the older books seem particularly difficult to read, and the strange costumes of the illustrations further deter the child. Moreover, these books are not common talk now as they were when first printed, and the children seeing them unused on library shelves while the grown people discuss the latest best sellers, naturally prefer something more popular. So, if they read novels at all, they are likely to read present-day ones, which are most sadly unsuited for them.

Such is the problem of the girl's reading. By the age of 12 or 13 she is ready for much reading matter, and we are between two evils, girls' stories, which, innocuous enough in many cases, have no real worth, and modern fiction. Might there be a possible third course in a revival of interest among grown people in the romances of their youth, so enthusiastic as to plunge the girls of to-day headlong into the glorious pages of Dickens, and Hawthorne, Scott or Thackeray?

THE RISE OF A NEW LITERATURE FOR GIRLS.

Or is it possible that a new fiction could be created for girls, substituting for the unconvincing and unattractive heroine a more ardent, active and lovable one. As we look back over the history of children's literature, we see that authors have taken advantage of the idealism of girls, have catered to it, but, in many cases, in an introspective and morbid manner. This was the secret of the popularity of the Elsie Dinsmore type and "The Wide, Wide World." Miss Alcott's "Little Women" owes its phenomenal popularity, which has not been displaced in 45 years, to the fact that the girls she portrays, though striving to realize their aspirations, are none the less normal, healthy, fun-loving young people. Still later we have a new type in "Rebecca of Sunnybrook Farm." Here is an ardent little being who changes all the simple humdrum happenings of a limited life into joyous experiences, whose vivid imagination colors every dull and dreary thing with rosy light. Aside from the pleasure Rebecca has given to her readers, she has done much in the education of writers, so that books depicting wholesome, happy-hearted children are on the increase.

But there is still much to be done for the girl's books, and one wonders what effect the present woman's movement may have upon them. Will it introduce a new type of girl, and will it broaden the limited scope of her stories? Let us hope that tales with heroines too stupid or too lacking in imagination to be other than good, and those appealing to the introspective tendency of the girl will pass away forever, and that we may have for girls in the impressionable, adolescent period reading which shall broaden their interests and strengthen their sinews, mental and moral.

A BOOK-MARK TO SAVE EYESIGHT.

REFLECTION by the reader is supposed to be beneficial; reflection by the page is injurious; so now we have a reflecting book-marker to prevent too much reflection of the wrong sort. That much injury is done by glistening pages that throw the light into the reader's eye is asserted by Dr. John Neely Rhodes, of Philadelphia, who describes in The Ophthalmic Record (Chicago) what he calls a "reflecting book-mark," intended to call the reader's attention to the presence of injurious reflection of this kind. When the paper is highly glazed the reflection is noted at once and the angle of the page is altered to avoid it. But when the high glaze is absent the reflection is often unnoticed and gets in its vicious work all unknown to the victim. In such a case a bit of bright material on the page will catch the reader's eye and warn him of his danger. Writes Dr. Rhodes:

"Book publishers and binders should be urged to bind their publications with one of these devices attached, or at least with a ribbon, to which a marker might be fastened, in order that every book reader may be educated to see his danger.

"The marker should be stamped out of bright aluminum or tin, and have printed or stamped on it instructions telling how a book may be held to produce the injurious reflections, and also how it should be held to avoid them. . . .

"I want to emphasize the fact that it is a mistake to hold even dull paper at such an angle as would cause it to reflect vicious light into the eye if the paper were shiny. I firmly believe that all readers' eyes should receive less injury if their books or papers, no matter as to color or condition, were held at such an angle that reflected rays from the illuminating source could not enter the pupils.

"Persistent use of this contrivance with book or paper will, I hope, soon render the reader as much afraid of glare as some of our patients already are of germs. About a year ago I made a demonstration of this evil to a prominent optician, and he seemed wonder-struck, but when I met him again some months later he told me that he was sorry I had called his attention to the matter, for now he could scarcely get away from the blamed thing.

"It would be well for bookkeepers, stenographers, and even mechanics to take one of these devices with them in their labors so that they might avoid working in a glare, by placing the instrument on their account-books, or on any bright object over which they are engaged.

"Rays from glazed paper are injurious, and printing should not be done on such stock. If, however, a reader is educated to hold properly his journal or book, he can read on glazed paper without injury—but the paper must be held flat, not rolled or curved. . . .

"Place the printed side of the marker against the page of your book, then follow the conventional method, take the book in your left hand and turn your back to the light so that the light shines over your left shoulder. Now, shift the position of your book until the reflected light is pouring directly into your eyes. Holding the book in this position for a few minutes will teach you the bad effects of glare. Just tilt the book the least bit, and notice the relief caused by the disappearance of the reflection—it is a lesson you will never forget.

"Notice that this phenomenon occurs when the book is held in what teachers consider the best position. The truth is, that for reading it matters not which shoulder the light shines over, nor does it matter which hand holds the book, if the holder is ambidextrous. If one who is writing is not ambidextrous, but, for example, right-handed, then the holding of the book in the left hand leaves the right hand free for writing, and, at the same time, keeps the writing itself out of all shadow.

"I understand that the New York City Board of Education has a rule which directs the student to hold his book at approximately 45 degrees. He who formulated that rule evidently knew nothing about the conditions which cause a glaring reflex. The relative position of the source of illumination with respect to each child governs the angle at which the book must be held."

ORDERING MUSIC—AND ORDERING BOOKS.

A RECENT ISSUE of the little "Trade Letter" of G. Schirmer, Inc., the well-known music publishers, had something to say about "ordering music." Hardly a word of it was directly applicable to the average book store; yet, although there was nothing new in it, it is a restatement for a different trade of directions, hardly a word of which are not, indirectly, equally applicable to the book-store.

"There are many efficient and experienced order clerks engaged in the music stores of this country," it says, "who know how to order intelligently and carefully, so as to avoid the delays, expense, disappointment and loss of business which is apt to result when the wrong music is received. Such clerks need read no further in this article since it is not intended for them—except so far as to let us say that no publishing house can claim to be infallible in filling orders, so that the help that is rendered by these painstaking order clerks is all the more appreciated by the publishers.

"Order clerks who are not experienced are apt to leave too much to be taken for granted or guessed at. For example, when a song is ordered there is no rule enabling us to decide which key or voice is wanted unless it is mentioned. The older houses, whose clerks are experienced, are scrupulously exact on this point. Also in ordering, let us say, "Minuet" by Beethoven, how shall it be known which one of the ten or more Beethoven Minuets is wanted: and if the celebrated Minuet in G, how shall it be known that you want the arrangement for violin and piano unless it is so stated in the order? Also, in ordering the famous Barcarolle from "The Tales of Hoffmann" it is well to specify whether piano solo, song, vocal duet (as originally written in the opera), organ, violin and piano, since all of these arrangements exist and are in general demand. It is best to leave nothing to be taken for granted. A guess is apt to be wrong and you will be disappointed.

"It would seem superfluous to ask dealers to sign their orders (unless they are on a printed letter heading); but the number of orders received every day without town, date, or signature makes this warning necessary. The cheap stock-form order blanks bought from stationers is one cause of this neglect; and these forms also have one other grave defect. They have no individuality; they all look alike; and where hundreds of orders are in process of filling and shipping mistakes and mix-ups are invited and very easily occur.

"It delays an order and causes more or less confusion to include in the order any correspondence, such as request for price quotation, claims, or reference to previous orders. All these should be in a separate communication.

"Every dealer should keep a copy of his orders. We do not here refer to the list of items in his book which have been supposedly copied out on order blanks, but carbon copies or letter press copies of the actual orders as sent."

Any book store clerk who thinks the above may to any possible degree, however indirectly, apply to him, may do well to read it over again, this time mentally substituting "book" for "song" or "music"; "edition" for "arrangement," "binding" or "volume" for "key" or "voice."

REMINISCENCES OF THE RARE-BOOK TRADE, VII.

SOME MEMORIES OF GEORGE PHILIP PHILES—PART I

CONCERNING A BOOK OR TWO OF HIS ONCE LARGE COLLECTION: HIS FRIENDSHIPS AMONG BOOKLOVERS: HIS CONTRIBUTIONS AS BIBLIOGRAPHER, EDITOR, ETC.

"TO MENTION the name of George Philip Philes, would mean nothing to the multitude, but to many men of letters it would mean a Master of the Science of Bibliography, to whom many of them have been indebted in the past forty years for advice and criticism, and on whose delicate Greek face, even in advancing years, behind his quaint spectacles, is the impress of intellectual alertness in old age.

"His stock of erudition is sufficient to provide liberal equipment for a half dozen ordinary scholars. In the midst of the busy round, I have no more wholesome diversion than to sit back and listen to his acute comment on books and literature, and to marvel at the variety and the exactness of his learning. The most placid of philosophers, he is also the most scrupulous of critics. The most charitable of men in his scrutiny of the weaknesses of the literary character, he was one known in New York as the literary constable in detecting the plagiarist, humbug or pretender.

"I could tell not a little of his attainments in classic lore and foreign literature, of his relations to the bookworms of old Nassau street, and of the extent of his varied researches in Europe and the United States since the days when he left college. But I know that were he aware at this moment that I am writing a word about his personality, he would rush at once to me and insist that I should not thrust him into public notice. Some day I hope to overcome his diffidence long enough to enable you to view what I think would be an interesting picture of the mental habits of his simple life, together with the useful things he has done in his quiet, unostentatious way to promote the cause of honest learning."

Unfortunately that day never came to Mr. William Perrine, editor-in-chief of the (Philadelphia) Evening Bulletin, who wrote the above in 1898—shortly before Mr. Philes' retirement from more active service.

And now, after the lapse of fifteen years, Mr. Philes has gone into the Unknown and many who knew him have likewise passed from the scene of earthly activity.

He had in his possession a few interesting relics, which even if their authenticity lacks a link or two in the chain of proof, are interwoven with bits of fascinating literary history, history which concerns that delightful, less worldly age, which, alas! is fading into obscurity.

MOLIERE'S COPY OF MONTAIGNE'S ESSAYS

About a copy of Montaigne's Essais, for instance, hangs a tale worth the telling. A tale which will be enhanced for those who remember Mr. Philes and his accurate knowledge of books and really marvelous memory regarding them.

This copy of Les Essais De Michel Seigneur De Montaigne Enrichie D'Annotations e n Marge Corrigée et Augmentée. (Engraved title containing portrait, mounted, 8°, calf), Rouen, 1614, is not we understand, of special significance, were it not for three initials, J. B. P. in faded ink, at the top of the third or fourth page. The book was No. 971 in the "Catalogue of the Library of the late John L. Appleton," the New Yorker, which was sold by John Anderson, Jr., during February, 1902. Mr. Philes, or "G. P. P." as he loved to sign himself, and as we shall henceforth in this article indicate him, sent in a bid of about seven dollars, and secured the prize.

What if the rudely executed initials were no other than those of Jean Baptiste Poquelin (deMolière), as Mr. Philes believed them to be!

In the early fifties, when G. P. P. was a young man in New York City, he chanced to learn of this book which was then in the possession of a certain French gentleman, M. Picot, who as early as 1837 conducted in the city a French School—famous in its day.

Later this same gentleman was located in another fashionable school in Union Square, just above 14th Street. Unfortunately the name of the old teacher and that of the owner of the school on Union Square, were carelessly written by us and have not been verified. We think the school was Madame Chigarres, and that there is reference to M. Souhard in the Family Magazine or Monthly Abstract of General Knowledge, vol. VI, N. Y. 1839. John L. Appleton, himself a teacher, (he published a "German and English Grammar") and a book collector, became intimate with the interesting French professor about the same period that G. P. P. and Appleton's acquaintance was ripening into close friendship. Appleton learned that M. Souhard had been acquainted in Paris with members of the Molière family—members or connections—and had secured not only this particular copy of Montaigne but other things of interest in the same connection, which M. Souhard in his poverty-stricken age—about 1860—was obliged to sell. Thus Appleton secured the copy of Montaigne.

G. P. P. often had the "treasure" in his keeping at his store, and as a devoted French scholar earnestly coveted it.

He said he "lay in wait forty years" to purchase that book of Appleton! And at last, after he had left the city, his chance came—evidently the initials on an inner page were unnoticed—and he had his heart's desire. But, alas! like many other things coveted by us poor mortals, this came too late. G. P. P. used to say that there was an article on Molière's autograph and a facsimile in the unindexed portion of the Gentleman's Magazine; he could not find it again, and he evidently knew nothing of the sheet of Molière's handwriting discovered in 1867. At any rate, since G. P. P.'s death, Librarian Harris of Cornell University Library, has shown us several facsimiles of Molière's initials. One of them was the signature to his marriage certificate and was more regular than the autograph in the copy of Montaigne. Unfortunately G. P. P.'s book, which was carefully guarded and the genuineness of which he could never positively prove—and, oh, he needed to sell it as much as the old Frenchman ever needed to dispose of it in 1860—is now packed up and sent to New York awaiting possible sale.

G. P. P. once asked us to write Mme. Theophile Belin, who came over from Paris to the first Hoe sale. He thought she could authenticate the signature. The letter was written as requested but the communication seems never to have reached Mme. Belin.

A BURNS RELIC.

G. P. P. had an odd shaped copper kettle which he called his "Robert Burns' Toddy Kettle." The evidence that the kettle formerly belonged to the great poet rests mainly upon G. P. P.'s assertion, being otherwise wholly circumstantial; but the fact that John V. L. Pruyn of Albany purchased from a common source, in 1864, the famous relic, "Robert Burns' Toddy Ladle," and that Samuel L. Barlow, also purchased a punch bowl, which so careful a collector believed to have once been in the possession of Burns, is not evidence to be lightly cast aside. Pruyn paid $110.00 for his ladle in 1864, and several years ago, when his collection was sold, the ladle brought a much larger sum. But the chain of evidence in this instance was complete because of the following inscription engraved thereon:

"This Toddy-Ladle formerly belonged to Robert Burns the Ayrshire Poet. Presented to John Allen by Mrs. Jane C. Hubbard, April 20, 1857." Furthermore in the "Catalogue of the Books, Autographs, Engravings and Miscellaneous Articles, belonging to the late John Allen, under "Silver Plate, etc.," No. 5053, is "Robert Burns' Toddy Ladle."

This was G. P. P.'s story of his kettle. "Uncle Johnny Allen and he were chums in Vandewater Street days. The old man and the young man had the same hobbies. It was Allen's custom to make toddy for his guests of an evening, always using this little kettle. A month before the death of the old Scotchman, he engaged Mr. Sabin to catalogue his collection, preparatory to selling it. The work was nearly completed when the old man died. It would never have been accomplished but for the "voluntary assistance of others of Mr. Allen's friends." (This latter fact is recorded in Duyckinck's "Memorial of John Allen," Printed for the Bradford Club, New York, 1864.) It was the old friend's wish that G. P. P. should have the kettle and it was given, also, partly as compensation for work done.

As a genuine Scotchman, native of Kilburnie, Ayrshire (born in 1777, while Burns was born in 1759) it was but natural that a man of Allen's enthusiasm for collecting, should be particularly interested in everything pertaining to Scotland, Ayrshire and Burns. The Catalogue proves that this was the case.

This is no place to descant upon John Allen, the once famous collector, who for an half century educated New York City by his mere dwelling there. And though dead now another half century, no genuine lover of books and of art in America to-day, can afford to miss the delight of knowing second-hand concerning one whose treasures have long since "become the ornaments of many private libraries," and bear witness to the taste and enthusiasm of one, with whom collecting "was only his leisure employment."

POE'S OWN COPY OF "THE RAVEN."

G. P. P. often told us of his misfortune concerning "Poe's own copy" of "The Raven and Other Poems," New York 1845, and "The Tales Collected and Edited" by Evert A. Duyckinck, N. Y. 1845, bound together in one volume, 12° cloth. On one of the blank leaves is written "R. W. Griswold, Poe's own copy."

This was sold to G. P. P. in the executor's sale of "The Library of the late Rev. Rufus W. Griswold, D.D., L.L.D.," by Banks, Merwin & Co., at the Trade Sale Rooms, No. 13 Park Row, N. Y., May, 1859. Later James L. Graham borrowed the copy of him and died with it in his possession. We do not suppose the fact that he had owned this book and that it was never returned, greatly impressed G. P. P. until the high prices for Poeana raged. G. P. P. abominated Poe. But when money—a very little—would have benefitted an old book-man, it was most aggravating that the copy, lost from mind by the borrower, should have brought such an exorbitant price.

Herewith is G. P. P.'s note concerning it, in the Griswold Catalogue:

"This unique Poe volume which of late years has acquired considerable notoriety among Poe editors as the "James Lorimer Graham Copy," which is now in the possession of the Century Club of New York City, really and legitimately belongs to George P. Philes, who purchased it at the Griswold sale, Thursday, May 26, 1859, for the munificent sum of fifty cents. This fact is abundantly confirmed by a copy of Griswold's Catalogue with the prices and names of the buyers, which is now before me. The Poe volume will be found on page 95, No. 1989, with the price paid for the book and the name, Mr. Philes, as the buyer on the margin."

G. P. P. enjoyed the card found among John Allen's papers, in the witty, old Scotchman's handwriting:

"LENDING Books."

An ancient writer says, in reference to the custom of lending books, that, "To lend a book is to lose it, and borrowing but a hypocritical pretence for stealing."

G. P. P. used also to quote this in reference to a Charles Lamb book which Bronson Alcott once borrowed and never returned.

G. P. P.'S. FRIENDSHIP AMONG BOOK LOVERS.

Preparatory to enumerating some of the well known men whose friendship G. P. P. gained because of their common passion for rare and good books, it may be proper to call to mind the old book shop, 64 Nassau Street, New York City, where G. P. P. royally dispensed book-nectar until the establishment and all its contents was destroyed by fire—a total loss—in the late sixties.

Early in the sixties G. P. P.'s old bookshop was a rendezvous for the literati of New York, Philadelphia and Boston, and for foreigners of importance who were visiting the city. It was a sort of literary center where gentlemen congregated to discuss literature and examine or buy rare books, be advised as to books needed for specific studies—little matter what the subject. Dr. William A. Hammond, once surgeon-general of the Army, wrote in 1867 a novel—probably long since forgotten—entitled "Robert Severne, His Friends and his Enemies." The scene of this novel was laid in G. P. P.'s bookstore. The outward appearance and the interior of the store, G. P. P. has told us are correctly described, and particularly the private den—G. P. P.'s retreat—wide open only to the initiated. As this is pictured, it is particularly fascinating to all true bibliophiles. "Into this sanctum sanctorum" writes Dr. Hammond, "casual buyers (and it seemed to be a matter of the most supreme indifference to all concerned in the establishment whether any sales were made or not) were not admitted. None but the regular frequenters of the establishment, who, from long acquaintance, had become recognized as true bibliophiles, were allowed to enter its limits, and thus to the great majority of those who were courageous or earnest enough to visit John Holmes' bookshop, his existence was not only unknown, but was even unsuspected."

NOTES FROM PARIS.

Special Correspondence to The London Bookseller and The New York Publishers' Weekly.

Now is the time* when every good boy—if he is providentissimus puer—begins to cultivate the acquaintance of his rich uncles and aunts. His conscience tells him that—with the exception of a few days preceding his birthday—he has bestowed small attention upon those relatives during the last eleven months, but, when he sees the festinate preparations in the shops, he is forcibly reminded of a neglect, which it is probable those relations have borne with equanimity.

Perhaps, if there is anxiety on the nephew's side as to what he shall get, there is even more on the uncle's as to what he shall give. Chocolate is but an evanescent joy, and if sent in a hand-painted box the youthful recipient is under the impression that he has been done out of a fair share of his present, his mother or sister having an eye to the box when empty, and urging him to undue haste in the absorption of the contents. Besides, there is always the difficulty as to quantity—a small box laying the giver open to a charge of meanness, and a large one calling for the intervention of the family physician. Mechanical toys are a joy for an evening or two, but they are soon broken, or wearied of, and are relegated to the lumber room. Books are perhaps the safest investment; they may be appreciated, and, if not, their red or blue backs make an imposing addition to the family bookshelves. Moreover, they fit all ages and all tastes, as a study of the Christmas number of the "Bibliographie" will abundantly show.

To begin with the juveniles. If a boy has a taste for natural history, there is "A la Gloire des Bêtes," by A. Fabre, with 50 illustrations by that very clever designer, who elects to be known by the name of Job (Mame and fils); or, for the older student, there are the works of Fabre, illustrated by photographs (Delagrave). The comic side of animal life is represented by that irresistibly funny artist, Benjamin Rabier, whose biggest work of the year is "Le Buffon" (Garnier), but who has eight or nine other albums published by the same firm, not to speak of several issued by other houses, and a series of boxed animals cut out of cardboard and made to stand up (Nilsson).

For those who like adventures, there is the evergreen Jules Verne, who is always popular, though science, by the invention of submarine boats and navigable balloons, has converted into facts the imaginations of the author. His complete works—"known and unknown"—have been issued in 46 volumes by Hetzel, each volume containing two or more tales. As for single stories by less known authors, I should require several columns merely to enumerate them. The writers have invented all sorts of adventures for their youthful heroes and heroines. Even the wreck of the "Titanic" has been laid under contribution, and we have the history of a little boy and girl, and a sailor, their fidus Achates, who were cast on the coast of Labrador, and suffered many hardships at the hands of the Indians. In another story, two young men are wrecked on an Australasian island, the sole proprietor of which is a misanthropic genius, who, with a view to such a contingency, has liberally sprinkled the island with infernal machines. Of course they escape being blown up, and one of them marries the misanthrope's daughter. To these must be added a few translations from Sir Walter Scott, Fenimore Cooper, Rudyard Kipling, and Mark Twain.

History, especially military history, is fully represented, and, as a matter of course, Napoleon looms large both in works for adults and juveniles. His name occurs in 22 titles, and there are fully twice as many books concerning real or fictitious persons who were, or are supposed to be, brought into contact with him, or lived at the same period. Perhaps the public will end by some day following the example of that nameless Athenian citizen who wanted to ostracize Aristides because he was tired of hearing of his virtues. Indeed, there has already been found one person—he was, I believe, a provincial librarian and was, possibly, tired of inscribing Napoleon's name in his catalogue—who was bold enough to follow the example of Betsy Prig with regard to Mrs. Harris, and didn't "believe there's no sich a person." He maintained, with very considerable ingenuity, that Napoleon was a solar myth, and his twelve marshals were the signs of the Zodiac. He worked out the theory with great skill, but found few, if any, followers—at any rate he did not make a school.

But as an antithesis to the belief that Napoleon did not live at all there now comes the startling statement that he lived twice, and for aught we know to the contrary may have had as many lives as Tybalt, king of cats. It seems that, in the year 1840, there appeared in England a small pamphlet entitled "Napoleon's Second Life," written anonymously by an English officer. The writer declared that he had helped Bonaparte to escape from St. Helena, and that they reached the coast of Africa, where the Emperor's genius for ruling men once more asserted itself, and he was elected king of the tribe of savages amongst whom he had been cast. He reigned there for nearly ten years—the British officer apparently acting as his Prime Minister—and, when he died in 1830 his body was, according to the custom of the country, burned, and the ashes thrown to the four winds.

If it should be asked why we have never heard of this little book, the reply is that only a few copies were printed for private circulation. It so happened that in that same year (1840) Prince Louis Napoleon made his descent upon Boulogne with a view to claiming the crown, and before starting on that unfortunate excursion he bought up and destroyed the entire edition of "Napoleon's Second Life"; though why he should have considered it more derogatory to his uncle's fame to have died king of an African tribe than to have died a prisoner in the hands of the English is not explained.

One of the difficulties about accepting this theory is that somebody died at St. Helena and was buried there as Napoleon, and his body was removed in 1840 and conveyed to France, where the coffin was opened and the remains identified. It must have been difficult to find a "double-ganger" in a small island like St. Helena, but Sir Hudson Lowe—like Habakkuk—was "capable of anything," and a crime more or less on his surcharged memory hardly matters. At any rate, one of the copies of "Napoleon's Second Life," which escaped the bonfire of Louis Napoleon, has fallen into the hands of M. Louis Millanvoy, who has translated it, and it is published as "La Seconde Vie de Napoléon" (Reiffel), but as only two hundred copies have been printed, a good many students of the Napoleonic era will have to continue in the error of their ways.

We are not likely, I hope, to have much ink spilled over this mystery, as has been the case with the young and unfortunate prince, the son of Louis XVI. The general impression is that he died of ill-treatment in the Temple Prison, but there are not wanting those who believe that he effected his escape, and a fair number of educated and intelligent people assert that, after many adventures, he died in Holland, and that his grandchildren or great-grandchildren are (or at least the eldest of them is) the legitimate successor to the throne of France. Except as a curious historical mystery, the matter is not of the slightest importance, as the descendants of the clockmaker, Naundorff, have but a very remote chance of ever wearing the crown, but in the matter of book-making his supporters have done their best to forward their cause, and not only run a monthly magazine, but have found a Paris publisher, M. Daragon, to bring out a dozen or more volumes on the subject. On the other hand, M. François Laurentie, in a book on "Louis XVII" (Em. Paul), claims to prove by documentary evidence, of which he gives a number of interesting facsimiles, that the Prince did really perish in the Temple as is generally supposed.

CANADIAN NOTES.

THE MAGAZINE SITUATION IN CANADA.

TORONTO.—Canada's situation alongside the United States border has tended to make the Dominion a part of the circulation territory of the American magazines, with the result that local publications have had very little chance to develop. With an English-speaking population of less than five million whose tastes in literature are most cosmopolitan, the Canadian periodical has had a hard row to hoe. Obviously no Canadian magazine can hope for any circulation worth speaking about outside the Dominion, and inside the country it must needs compete with the much superior publications that come over from the United States. The only possible appeal is one to the patriotism of the people, and this appeal does not carry weight very far.

Still, there are a few monthlies and weeklies which are contriving to make a showing in Canada. The country's leading magazine, the Canadian, has now been in existence for a good many years and is successful in a limited way. It caters to the literary and artistic classes principally and is a well-printed and well-edited monthly, representative of the best in the country.

The second magazine, Maclean's, has been running for about eight years. Started originally as Busy Man's Magazine, it was at first purely a reprint magazine, but subsequently it was converted into a regular literary publication. It is more popular in style than the Canadian and is the most successful periodical in the country financially, having a large advertising patronage. With its September issue it adopted the larger size of page after the example of the American Magazine.

The Westminster Magazine, also a monthly, is said to have a larger circulation than either the Canadian or Maclean's. It is a neat little magazine of high tone, published in conjunction with a religious weekly, but quite independent of religious influences.

The Canada Monthly, which has just been changed from the old-style into the large-page size, is the fourth Canadian magazine. Its appeal is popular and it enjoys a considerable circulation, particularly in the west.

Busy Man's Canada, the latest arrival, is more of a business and financial publication than a literary magazine. With the exception of one or two magazines published in the west which are more or less of an advertising character, this is the total of Canada's monthly literary periodicals. It is obviously a very short list.

In weeklies, the Canadian Courier is the only purely literary publication. This paper has made a very game struggle for existence during the past eight years and under all the circumstances is a very creditable and representative sheet. In form it resembles Collier's and its appeal is distinctly national. One might also include Toronto Saturday Night, which has a wide circulation, but it is more of the weekly newspaper type than the magazine type.

Collier's Weekly, of course, ran a special Canadian edition for several years and maintained an editor in Toronto, but this policy was discontinued last spring, when the price was reduced to five cents.

No list of Canadian magazines would be complete, however, without some reference to the University Magazine, a quarterly, run on the style of the English reviews. This magazine is handsomely printed and contains the best literary material that can be procured in Canada. It is practically owned by a wealthy Montrealer, who edits it, and is said to lose heavily in its publication.

For many years to come or until Canada's population is very much greater than at present, it is not to be expected that she will produce anything in the magazine way that can compete with the leading American magazines. At the same time editors of American magazines should not overlook the fact that Canadians are decidedly patriotic and that a little more attention to Canadian topics would be appreciated by their large circle of readers north of the international boundary, as well as insuring them a continuance of support from this quarter.

OBITUARY NOTES.

ALBERT L. BURT.

ALBERT L. BURT, President of the A. L. Burt Company, died Dec. 28th at the age of 71 years at his residence, 178 Brooklyn Avenue, Brooklyn.

Mr. Burt was born at Belchertown, Mass., and educated in the public schools there. He started to work in a grocery store and later became a traveling salesman. When he was traveling more than thirty years ago for Case, Lockwood & Brainerd, a leather goods house in Hartford, Conn., he conceived the plan of becoming a publisher. His first book was a small dictionary, intended for use as a premium by mail order houses. The dictionary was followed by other books for mail order houses, such as "Law Without Lawyers," "Household Recipes," "Useful Knowledge," and "The Family Physician."

After his earlier ventures in publishing had proved successful, Mr. Burt took a bolder step, and in 1890 began publishing cloth-bound standard works. He was a pioneer in this country in the field of printing the classics in attractive form at popular prices. His "Home Library" of several hundred titles had an universal sale for many years and is still in demand.

After founding the A. L. Burt Company, now at 52 Duane Street, New York, Mr. Burt published books of every description, cloth-bound and paper-bound, from encyclopedias to the lightest juvenile fiction, including Popular editions of Copyright Fiction. Mr. Burt had been for many years a Trustee of the Plymouth Church, Brooklyn, and was known as an enthusiastic fisherman with a bent for trout. He leaves a wife, Sarah H. P. Burt, and three sons, Harry P., Frederic A., and Edward F. Burt, all of whom have been associated with their father in business for some years.

JOHN PHIN, for many years connected with the publishing business, died December 29th at Paterson, N. J., aged 83 years. Mr. Phin was born in Melrose, Scotland, in 1830. He was the author of a number of popular books on industrial subjects and for some time was Professor of Chemistry, in the State College of Pennsylvania, being the oldest member of the faculty of that institution. For many years he was proprietor of the Industrial Publication Co., New York.

PERIODICAL NOTES.

THE NEW FICTION PUBLISHING COMPANY (W. M. Clayton, proprietor), publishers of Snappy Stories, announce the publication of a new all-fiction magazine, Romance, beginning with the March issue. Romance will carry short stories, verse, novelettes and serials—all of romantic trend.

NATHAN STRAUS, JR., has purchased Puck, the weekly comic paper. The articles of incorporation of a new company, which will publish the paper, have been filed in Albany. It is capitalized for $50,000. The incorporators are Mr. Straus, Max J. Kohler, and H. Grant Straus. The paper was purchased about two weeks ago. Mr. Straus does not contemplate making any changes in organization or policy at this time. He will not take active charge until his return from Palestine in May.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE LATEST NOVELTIES in the Jordan Ride Books are sets boxed in miniature steamer trunks, ready for the bridal tour.

MME. MARIA MONTESSORI, who has been on a six-week's lecture tour in this country, sailed on the Lusitania, December 24th.

THE LONDON house of John Lane recently published "When William Came," a story of London under the Hohenzollerns, by H. H. Munro, who is well known for his amusing work as a satirist.

UPON REQUEST from booksellers, Doubleday, Page & Co. will furnish appropriate material for a window display in connection with their new Williamson book, "It Happened in Egypt."

HUGH WALPOLE is writing another long book, "The Rising City" as part of a larger scheme. His publishers, the George H. Doran Company, promise a uniform edition of all his work up to date.

MR. ROLAND B. UNWIN expects to arrive in New York about January 8th with a large collection of the forthcoming publications of Mr. T. Fisher Unwin. Letters can be addressed to 145 East 21st Street, New York.

TO EXPLAIN the increase in price of their invaluable "Who's who," the 1914 edition of which is just out, The Macmillan Co. call attention to the fact that this issue is more than double the size of the original one of ten years ago.

THEIR TITLES clearly express the difference between "The Love Affairs of a Homely Girl," by Jean Louise de Forest, and "The Clutch of Circumstance," by Leighton Graves Osmun, two novels which Sully and Kleinteich publish on January 17th.

"BOYCOTTS AND THE LABOR STRUGGLE," by Harry W. Laidler will be published by John Lane Co. on January 9th. It is the first book written in English on the legal and economic phases of the question, and in discussing the methods used by the opposing sides it reviews cases of current importance.

"MY WIFE'S HIDDEN LIFE," to be published on February 16th, by Rand McNally & Co., is the chronicle of a woman's self-sacrifice. Her husband's ignorance of her ideals, and the evil influence of another woman on him, form its dramatic element, and the logical development of the whole is said to make its moral convincing.

JAMES BRODIE & Co., York Place, London, W. C., announce a new series under the title of "Standard bearers of the Faith" being the lives of the Saints specially written for the needs of children. The books will be illustrated, and the first volume, a "Life of St. Ignatius Loyola," will be published immediately. Particulars can be obtained of the publishers.

BARRAETT H. CLARKE, the translator of Hervieu, writes in an unusual way about other modern dramatists in "The Continental Drama of To-day—Outlines for its Study," which Henry Holt & Co. will publish in January. He indicates how the skilled dramatists construct their plays, plan for various dramatic effects, and meet the various dramatic problems.

ISABEL GORDON CURTIS's new heroine, "The Congresswoman" found that her wealth opened a leadership in society which her native ability could not gain in practical politics. Unable to hold her own against unscrupulous forces, she became discouraged with her public office—and repudiating the whole suffrage question, she married and returned to her old home. The Browne-Howell Co. of Chicago are the publishers.

AN EXHIBITION of the processes by which a book is made is open in the exhibition gallery of the Scribner Bookstore. Actual objects used in the manufacture are shown, and wherever this is impossible, they are represented by photographs. "The Story of the Making of a Book," the illustrated pamphlet which supplements the exhibit will be sent free upon request to Charles Scribners' Sons.

A. L. BONNEY, for the past twelve seasons with The John C. Winston Co., has severed his connection with that concern, and will represent the following publishers during the season of 1914, covering the Pacific Coast and the same sections of the Middle West and East that he has been making: Hamming Publishing Co., McBride, Nast & Co., A. J. Holman Co., Franklin Bigelow Corporation, Laird & Lee Corporation, New York Book Company, and others. He will also represent Thomas Y. Crowell Co., in a part of his territory.

G. W. DILLINGHAM COMPANY announces for early issue "The Lure," by George Scarborough; "The Wasp," by Theodore Goodridge Roberts; "The Return of the Night Wind," by Varick Varnady; "Goddess of the Dawn," by Margaret Davies Sullivan; "Boobs as seen by John Henry," by George V. Hobart; "The Price," from the play of George Broadhurst, by Arthur Hornblow; "Flying U. Ranch," by B. M. Bower; "Matthew Ferguson," by Margaret Blake; "The Art of the Photoplay" and "Traffic in Souls," novelized from the great photoplay, by Eustace Hale Ball.

"THE CLIQUE," of London, is asking subscriptions to the purse for Joseph Pollard, an unfortunate bookseller of Truro, Cornwall. Several years ago Mr. Pollard was compelled by tubercular trouble to live entirely in the open air, and to leave the management of his business to his son. Recently this son succumbed to the same disease, and the business was assigned for the benefit of the creditors. From his farm products, Mr. Pollard has a weekly income of about £1, for the support of his wife, his very old father, his disabled son, and his younger children. The purse will be a token, at this holiday season of the sympathy felt by his fellow booksellers, and the case is so urgent a one that we venture to repeat the call on this side the water.

BUSINESS NOTES.

SALT LAKE CITY, UTAH.—H. Lyon Baynes, proprietor of the Banner Book Store, with which the Salt Lake Book Shop was recently consolidated, will open the new consolidated store, renamed the Black Cat Book Shop, at 56 E. 2d South.

PICK-UPS.

WELL CIRCULATED.

"DO YOUR FOLKS take Sizzling Stories?" asks the solicitor who represents a periodical celebrated for the just-on-the-border-or-over stories it features?

"Do we?" repeats the boy addressed. "We take four copies—one that father hides from mother and sister, one that mother hides from sister and father, one that sister hides from father and mother, and one copy that none of 'em know I have in my room."

ONE WAY OF BOOSTING BUSINESS.

Barber—"Poor Jim has been sent to a lunatic asylum."

Victim (in chair)—"Who's Jim?"

"Jim is my twin brother, sir. Jim has long been broodin' over the hard times, an' I suppose he finally got crazy."

"Is that so?"

"Yes, he and me has worked side by side for years, and we were so alike we couldn't tell each other apart. We both brooded a great deal, too. No money in this business now."

"What's the reason?"

"Prices too low. Unless a customer takes a shampoo it doesn't pay to shave or hair-cut. Poor Jim, I caught him trying to cut a customer's throat because he refused a shampoo, so I had to have the poor fellow locked up. Makes me sad. Sometimes I feel sorry I didn't let him slash all he wanted to. It might have saved his reason. Shampoo, sir?"

"Yes."—Milwaukee Journal.

"EST"—THE TROUBLE MAKER.

UNDER the above caption, Richard H. Waldo, the advertising manager of Good Housekeeping, wrote an "Open Letter" to readers last month that will well apply to many other readers.

"If some genius," he says, "will invent a pen that will balk, splutter and retire from business rather than trace the little syllable 'est' we will gladly buy a few dozen of the article, gold-mounted, and present it to various people who write advertisements. Doing so will save us the necessity of returning to their authors, for revision, advertisements bristling with 'greatest,' 'cheapest,' 'finest,' 'purest'—and above all, with 'best.'"

"One of Good Housekeeping's fixed rules is not to admit advertisements which apply superlatives to the product advertised. We ask him, 'Suppose, at the same time we print the statement that your machine is the best, some other concern, making a similar apparatus, advertises with us that theirs is best? Where does that leave us, for consistency—we, who absolutely guarantee every claim our advertisers make?'"

"I never met a manufacturer in my life who said that he made the 'second best' article of its kind on the market! I never expect to. But I think that if such a rara avis should turn up, and advertise his product as 'second best,' the startling, the revolutionary frankness of the thing would sell his goods—because it would establish his truthfulness on such a Washingtonian basis that in the next breath he might claim almost any other merit for his goods and be believed!"

"If one advertises that an article is healing, delicious, economical, light, durable, nickel-plated, antiseptic, or anything else definite, the mind can grasp the claim, weigh it and act on it. But what does 'best' really mean? Best for whom? For what? Isn't it about as inept as the 'best best' occasionally used by frenzied advertisers?"

"You open a magazine at random, see the name of a soap more or less unknown to fame, and are told it is the 'best soap made.' Of all the hundreds of soaps devised by man's skill in centuries, you just happen to have learned of the supreme detergent of them all! You feel as Madam Curie felt when she discovered radium—or, if you are like most of us, you breathe 'Piffle!' and turn the page.

"The genius who wrote of his soap 'It floats' knew the art of persuasion better.

"When great scholars settle on what are the hundred 'best' books, when parties no longer wrangle about whether tariff or no tariff is 'wisest,' when critics reach some unanimity that either Dickens or Thackeray was 'greatest'—we will recall 'est,' the trouble-maker, from exile. Until then superlatives are banned—for the good of the Service."

The Publishers' Weekly

Subscription Rates

One year, postage prepaid in the United States, $4.00; foreign, $5.00.
Single copies, 10 cents. Educational Number, in leatherette, 50 cents; Christmas Bookshelf, 25 cents.

Advertising Rates

One page $25 00
Half page 14 00
Quarter page 7 00
Eighth page 4 00
One-sixteenth page 2 00

The above rates are for unspecified positions. Special rates for preferred positions (full pages only).

Higher rates are charged for the Summer Reading, Educational Number and Christmas Bookshelf, and for the monthly Book Review supplement sections.

Advertising copy should reach us Tuesday noon—earlier if proof is desired out-of-town. Forms close Thursday night.

Under the heading "BOOKS WANTED" book-trade subscribers, under their own names, are given five nonpareil lines (exclusive of address) free advertisement for specific books out of print in any issue except special numbers, but not exceeding 100 lines a year. If over five lines are sent the excess is at 10 cents a line. Books not out of print, unspecified wants, repeated matter, and all advertisements from nonsubscribers cost 10 cents a line. Objectionable books are excluded so far as they are noted.

In answering, please state edition, condition and price, including postage or express charges. Houses that will deal exclusively on a cash-on-delivery basis should put [Cash] after their firm name. The appearance of advertisements in this column, or elsewhere in the WEEKLY, does not furnish a guarantee of credit. While it endeavors to safeguard its columns by withholding the privileges of advertising should occasion arise, booksellers should take usual precautions in extending credit.

"Books Wanted" must be designated by actual title, not by "any."

Write your wants plainly, on one side of the sheet only. Illegible "wants" are ignored. The WEEKLY is not responsible for errors. Parties with whom there is no account must pay in advance.

Under "BOOKS FOR SALE" or for other small undisplayed advertisements, the charge is 10 cents a nonpareil line. No reduction for repeated matter. Count seven words to the line.

Besides the titles listed under each of these headings cross reference is made from each to a limited number of cognate headings which collectively give all the new publications of the month in the given subject or group of subjects.

Inquirers looking for books on a specific topic should look under the general subject to which that topic belongs, i.e. GEOLOGY rather than SILURIAN PERIOD; MATHEMATICS rather than CALCULUS; ECONOMICS rather than WAGES. Books regarding specific Religious denominations, countries and persons, however, should still be sought for under their individual names.

IDONIA: A Romance of Old London

By Arthur F. Wallis

Early English opinions of this tale of love and roguery and the popularity it has already attained with the British public mark Mr. Wallis's first book as one of the successes of the season in England. It is confidently predicted that American readers will enthusiastically welcome this talented young English author's truly remarkable romance of the Elizabethan period.

Illustrated by Charles E. Brock. $1.30 net.

FROM THE ANGLE OF SEVENTEEN

By Eden Phillpotts
